To Whom It May Concern:

In the recent past, I have had the opportunity to work closely with CS Construction, Inc. on the City of Peoria CCTV upgrade project. Over the course of this project, CS Construction, Inc. consistently displayed a keen interest in acting upon the best interests of the end client (City of Peoria) by making decisions that were never 'the easy way out'. Also, during the course of the project, a number of occasions arose where project tasks fell between the lines of individual company responsibilities; CS Construction consistently took ownership of this middle ground in the interest of the project as a whole. These kinds of qualities in an integrator are undoubtedly a great asset to any project.

During the initial phases of this integration effort, CS Construction also showed an understanding of the project as a whole by considering the hurdle of not only deploying the new CCTV camera domes, but ensuring the end integration into the Chameleon control software was going to go smoothly by setting up all hardware in a test lab prior to field installation. In this particular example, this kind of foresight saved the project time and money and allowed other companies to get involved prior to issues becoming un-fixable.

Because of our past project experience working with CS Construction, I have no problem recommending them as an experienced hardware and software integrator.
